

Mythical "Unibear" spotted in wild

Is the Unibear a descendant of a species of long-lived super-bear, or is it just a harmful mix of hoax and wishful thinking? The Unibear is as much of a mystery to the Perfection Island Tourist Board as it is to the rest of us.

The naturalist, Sunbeam claimed to have found something in 1975 and the name Unibearicus Gloriositeryx was introduced by Daddles. Since then the absence of any physical remains, and the fact that Fluffy has mapped every inch of the Island, means the scientific community has dismissed it utterly.

The likelihood is that Unibears are small, bear-like langurs, creatures perfectly able to stand upright and to live in somewhere in the lush forests of Perfection Island. Otherwise all the so-called Uni-relics found so far have been discovered on closer inspection to be bits of normal bear or fluffowl.

Frame 352 from the Daddles film alleged by Sunbeam and Giggles to show a cryptid called Unibear, and by some others to show a normal bear with a horn stuck to his head.
